

A Day at 16 Forever

👁 48 ✓ 5 ★ 3

Chapter 1 by Natalya Nugent

I didn't expect that it be THAT bad the day I turned 17 but you know when life gives you lemons my mum always told me to squeeze them in other peoples eyes.

Chapter 2 by Natalya Nugent

So I guess you can say I did, I dyed my blonde hair so black it practically sucked in all the light, I pierced my eyebrow, and I started hanging around the Nighter's. The Nighter's are the non-humans... like me I turned into a Nighter my 17th birthday.

My mom hates the Nighter's because they also known as me like to egg her car and spray paint the neighborhood with inappropriate slang. And the other thing is my Mom doesn't know I'm a Nighter.

Chapter 3 by Natalya Nugent

I've been hiding this side of me for a long time. I leave at night a cross bow on my back. And I'm sliding back inside my window by 5:30 and sleeping only for a half hour. It's stuck's I could ramble about it all day long but if I told my mom. She'd shoot me. Literally, she's the ass hat who owns the shooting range. Everyone hates her. She's stubborn and sticks to the law like she's stricken by God if she did wrong. She won't ever let me go for a round, bitch.

I don't actually know how to use a crossbow, so it looks pretty cool.

So when I accidentally fire an arrow into my face, it's totally unexpected on my part. Wasn't this thing, like, supposed to sit on my back and look cool? The Nighters wince as I struggle and scream in a pool of my own blood, none of them willing to dial 911. Nobody wants to be associated with this group, lest they face the wrath of their parents. I continue to lose blood by the second, and I think that I have totally lost function of my left eye. I writhe in teenage angst and platelets.

Happy sixteenth birthday to me.
